U.S. Convoys

U.S. Navy Secretary Frank Knox, above, told the American Legion convention in Milwaukee today that, beginning tomorrow, the American fleet will protect all lease-lend cargoes traversing the sea between the American continent and the waters adjacent to Iceland. It was indicated that the U.S. navy would have sole responsibility for guarding the ships up to that point, with the Royal Navy taking over from there on.

$190,447,670 Supplies Sent On Lease-Lend

WASHINGTON, Sept. 15.—(AP)—President Roosevelt reported to congress today actual supplies of United States war supplies to nations fighting the Axis, under the lease-lend program, totaled $190,447,670, Aug. 31.

Of this amount, the report said, $100,000,000 was for agricultural commodities. The President said, however, that shipments were still being made on orders placed prior to passage of the lend-lease act and for which Britain is paying cash.

The figure of $100,447,670 represented expenditures for weapons and other supplies actually sent abroad. But the President added, defense articles transferred, including some still waiting to be shipped, amounted to an additional $100,000,000, while various services, such as repairing naval vessels, added up still another figure of $75,100,000.

In this service, transfers of title and actual supplies to the United States has provided $25,352,148 in assistance to the Axis.

Furthermore, expenditures for officers for services not yet finished added up approximately $150,000,000, Mr. Roosevelt said.

TOTAL DOLLAR VALUE

Thus, the President figures in his report that through the month of August the total dollar value of defense articles transferred and defense services rendered, plus expenditures for the month of August, totaled $190,447,670.

members of the American mission whom Harriman is to lead, came with Harriman and the Duke, all in flying planes.

Military experts expressed belief that among the British fighter planes sent to Russia were some of the newest, including possibly latest types of American-built planes, in order to challenge the German planes now manned on the eastern front.

It was understood that Germany had sent into action a new Messerschmitt-110 fighter which has not been reported in action before. This type was said to be a single seater fighter, with 1,600-horsepower Mercedes-Benz engine, capable of a speed of 400 miles an hour.

British quarters estimated that at least four squadrons of British planes, anywhere from 60 planes upwards, had been sent to the front and it was believed that the Messerschmitts would be tested against the Spitfires.

Canada's Man-Power

If Canada mustered 1,000,000 men in its armed forces, it would still be possible to carry on active production on farm and in factory, according to the Dominion Minister of Agriculture. "Necessary" of course means just that. In the conditions against there would be little time lost in making or growing things not really needed. For people, women and children would be doing the farm work and shop work.

It is not proper we shall have to recruit that many men. The revolution in the scale and habits of living down to this degree. But the statement is official evidence that we have as many men as we shall be able to get, and as will be required, without crippling production. There should therefore be no difficulty in getting the monthly quotas needed to keep expansion of the fighting forces in step with the available supplies of equipment.

Should there be delays in getting recruits, that will not be because there are not enough men, nor because enough cannot be spared from actually necessary productive industry.

A Rationing System

The Wartime Prices and Trades Board is to take charge of the rationing of food and clothing throughout Canada, the control to be exercised through a licensing system. Manufacturers, wholesalers, retailers, grocers, clothing stores and shoe stores, eating places of all kinds, will be required to obtain licenses from the Board to operate according to the conditions upon which the licenses are issued.

The powers of the Board, which will be brought into effect gradually, practically unlimited. By order it can set prices, govern the distribution of supplies to different areas, say how much any commodity purchaser may obtain, prescribe the amounts and kinds of food a patron may be served in a restaurant. These powers are to be used, when, where and in what degree may be necessary to divert the productive powers of industry to the output of essential commodities in the future.

This means that we are going under a rationing system, in the sense of all-out production of munitions and necessities. Luxury making and buying are to be restricted, progressively restricted, perhaps to the point of absolute prohibition in many lines. Instead of buying what we want, we shall have to be content with what can be provided when war needs have been met. To this abridgement of their ordinary rights and privileges the public will undoubtedly acquiesce willingly, and should do so cheerfully.

The Practicalities

If reconcentration week is to fulfill its purpose, or serve any useful purpose at all, it will have to be something more than a season of high emotionalism. What are not war needs? Are they munitions, good wages and fine resolutions. They are won by action, and unless reconcentration results in greater production than there was before, the effort will have been wasted and the let-up may do more harm than the period of excitation. It is for this reason that Canada needs men for its fighting forces. It needs munitions in the greatest volume the country can produce. It needs food supplies undisturbed to maintain the nation, its fighting forces, and the people of Great Britain. To these ends it needs the loyal obedience of Canadians everywhere to the letter of what it needs as well as to the spirit as well as to the letter of what-ever regulations are found to be necessary, and as well to whatever calls may come for voluntary co-operation along any line of endeavor.

Only in proportion as these vital needs are better met will that formal dedication be anything more than a failure and a useless exhaustion of nerve energy. The ranks of the army, navy and air force should fill up as rapidly as required. Strikes and lock-outs in essential industries should cease. Food production should be expanded. The wastage of gasoline should stop.

These are a few ways in which the influence of reconcentration week will work out in practice if the event is to be worth the trouble.

Berlin Defies Washington

Berlin lost no time in replying to President Roosevelt. The response came in the form of a paragraph that said: "The German navy and three warships have been sunk by its raiders, in a convoy en route to Britain from this continent. The report was, as usual, an exaggeration. In all, eight ships of the convoy failed to reach port. The other sinkings were imaginary."

This embellishment of the story may have been something more than the habitual Nazi disregard for facts. Perhaps there was also a desire to sharpen the defiance which the attack itself is to the naval forces of the United States. It is a good thing in the tactics of helping to suppress piracy in the Atlantic.

If anything was required to show the people of the United States that this provocative order was not an actual necessity, the attack surely supplies that. It may be assumed the sunken ships or some of them were loaded with munitions from United States factories or other products of American labor and capital. All of them may have been so loaded. That is the impression the Government and Congress of the United States intended for Britain, are now at the bottom of the sea. And it was assuredly no fault of the Americans that the whole convoy did not meet the same fate.

As directly as to British warships, this is a challenge to the patrol ships and planes of the United States. The Axis powers intend to go right on sinking United States ships and cargoes wherever they can be reached by a bomb or a torpedo. That is Berlin's reply, and the measure of the maritime rights it intends to permit the republic to have.

The census returns of the Maritime provinces contain a rather good joke on the government. To Nova Scotia and New Brunswick it is chiefly indebted for its present condition. The census returns show that the representation of these two friendly provinces in the House of Commons was reduced to one member each in 1891.

Struggle Can Be Ended Only By Decisive Defeat Of Hitler

Nazi Leader, by Creating Enemies, Has Lost Power to Make Any Peace

By WALTER LIPPMANN
It may be said, I believe, that there is a general feeling among men everywhere that events have outrun our opinions about them, and that the explanation why the Roosevelt-Churchill declaration got such a poor response, and the subsequent Hitler-Churchill declaration got almost no response at all. These official formulae seemed out-dated, no longer corresponding to the reality of the situation.

They are out-dated, in that both of them might just as well have been written in the summer of 1940 as in the summer of 1941. Thus in the Allied declaration there were, even at the one hand general promises for the future and on the other dated promises for the immediate future. The Hitler-Churchill declaration was a poor response to the Roosevelt-Churchill declaration, and the Hitler-Churchill declaration was a poor response to the Roosevelt-Churchill declaration.

he can get at them. Thus there has been formed under the pressure of his assaults the greatest military coalition since the world. But this is only one side of the shield. The other, which can no longer be neglected, is the effect of this transformation of the war upon Germany and her allies.

It must be just as evident to the German and Italian as it is to us that Hitler's astounding victories have not brought him the quiet and increasing number of enemies. Even if we did not know it from reliable reports, we could be certain that the German and Italian armies are not winning the war.

Dorothy Dix Says:

It is an old custom to hold a wife responsible for what her husband does. The first man started it by blaming the shortcomings on his wife's shoulders and hiding behind her fig leaves.

Adam has followed in his footsteps. The woman on "This Gave Me" has followed the alibi by which man has got by in his weakness, and she has been a man's friend when a man has been a woman's enemy.

Dorothy Dix says we don't blame it on him, but on his own incompetence and laziness or his nervous disposition. It is never a hankering for liquor that makes a man drunk. He is driven to drink by his wife's temper. It is never a man's lack of loyalty and his pharisaical instinct that makes him desert his wife and children for another woman. It is his wife's fault because she has got fat and middle-aged and is no longer as alluring as she was when she was 20. But, curiously enough, she does not share on the other foot and blame the husband for his wife's faults.

When a woman is extravagant, her husband never has any say. "Really, you can't blame her anything," her husband never tells her anything about his business, so she doesn't know what she can afford to spend. Nor does any one say the spender. "It is all her husband's fault. He won't give her an allowance."

When a wife falls in love with another man you never hear any say. "Poor soul, can you blame her when she is married to a fool like this?" Why, then, is it possible for a wife to be so foolishly in love with another man when she has never paid her complement or noticed how the looked, or given her the slightest indication that he still has a particle of affection for her?

When a woman gets nervous and fretful and complaining, no one ever says: "Well, why wouldn't she when all she has got out of marriage has been a life sentence at hard labor? You live on the world, too. You have to live with a perpetual groan."

People pity the man who has a nagging wife, but nobody ever says: "Her husband is to blame for it. He was a bright, happy, full of fun and easy to get along with when he married her. He made her give up all of her life, his outside interests and virtually drop out of society. Saw a woman's place in the home."

And so it goes through the whole list of common fault-finding and nine times out of ten, husbands and wives are the body they are because their mates made them that way.

What to Do

Bulges Can Be Slimmed Away

Bulges at the waistline—your front to stop and think about it. For middle age begins at the waist. A thickening there and the matrimonial figure you dread isn't so far away—UNLESS you exert.

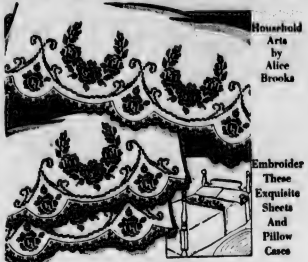

With the right exercises you can control that all-important middle section. Your figure drops into lines because abdominal muscles are slack. You have only to strengthen those muscles with such simple exercises as this one—and you'll be a long, long while appreciating that horrid word "matronly" written to you.

—Lie on back, arms at sides pull knees back to chest. 2-3 pull knees still further, lifting hips 1-2 inches from 2-3 lower hips to rest. Repeat 5 times. Rest 25 to 30 seconds altogether.

Other parts of the body you can't start too easy to firm are the chin line and the bust line.

Safe easy exercises for them are given in our 32-page booklet, How to Exercise for Slimming, Waistline, Bust and Arms.

Bake And Buy Enriched Flour Bread

By MRS. GAYNOR MADDOX

In this period of national emergency every housewife should know how to bake "enriched" bread. With prices falling every dollar must bring the maximum of nutritional value.

"Enriched" flour is made by adding to more than the ordinary white varieties, contribute more value to the diet.

"Enriched" flour is white flour with specified amounts of at least two vitamins, thiamin and riboflavin, and iron added. It looks no more like the white flour than the slightest indication that it still has a particle of affection for her.

Use "enriched" flour in recipes in the same way as plain white flour, but add no more soda than is necessary. For an excess tends to destroy the vitamins.

"Enriched" bread is bread which has in it the vitamins and minerals present in the "enriched" variety of white flour. Whole wheat bread is a substitute for other foods your body needs.

Although a whole wheat bread is a good source of vitamins, it is not as good as the same vitamins found in nature. They do exactly the same job as the vitamins found in nature. There is no danger of getting too much of vitamins by using "enriched" flour and bread.

Vitamins and minerals found in enriched bread are also present in other foods. Whole wheat flour, oatmeal and other whole-grain cereals, beans and peas, turnip greens, spinach, carrots, beef, chicken, liver and rabbit, and in lesser amounts in milk, collards, cauliflower, and other greens.

Use "enriched" flour in all your baking. It is a good source of vitamins and minerals found in nature. They do exactly the same job as the vitamins found in nature. There is no danger of getting too much of vitamins by using "enriched" flour and bread.

McKenney On Bridge

By Wm. E. McKENNEY, American Card Authority

In 1939 Walter von Zedwitz presented to the Contract Bridge League a solid gold trophy to be competed for annually by the Master players of the country. This was the beginning of the "McKenney" plan, one of the greatest rating systems of any sport in the world.

When the gold cup was first put into play, Von Zedwitz said that anyone who won it three times would have permanent possession of it. Although we felt no one would be able to win the trophy three times, we felt that it was a good idea to have a trophy that would remain in play with the understanding that it would be awarded to any player as a permanent possession.

Now, after seven years, Schenken is again the winner of the world championship. He has won it three times. He is now the owner of the trophy. He has won it three times. He is now the owner of the trophy.
